Are Vaccines Safe and Effective?

Plotkin's Vaccines, now in its 8th edition, is considered the single most important and influential textbook on the subject ever written. Dr Stanley Plotkin and his three co-authors are considered the preeminent experts on vaccines in America, if not the entire world.

Now, after decades of Plotkin and his disciples (and as a result, virtually every med school graduate) along with the entire medical and mainstream media establishments insisting that vaccines are among the most thoroughly tested products in the world, last month Plotkin published an article in the New England Journal of Medicine

THE GODFATHER OF VACCINES

Dr Stanley Plotkin publishes major reversal

(NEJM) admitting the exact opposite. It acknowledges that neither pre-licensure nor post-licensure are the studies sufficient to prove safety. He admitted, for example that pre-licensure clinical trials have very limited sample sizes and insufficient follow-up durations. One example of a study with insufficient follow-up was the trial done to approve the Hepatitis B vaccine given to newborns. The pre-licensure trial on that vaccine lasted, astonishingly, just 5 days. If a serious health event arose 6 days after the vaccine was administered, it was not statistically linked to the vaccine. Dr. Plotkin goes on to say that since pre-licensure studies are obviously inadequate, post-licensure studies are even more important. Without them, when millions of people get vaccinated in the real world, there is no way to scientifically judge whether a variety of adverse effects following immunization (AEFI) were caused by the vaccines. He then points out the disturbing fact there is currently no money budgeted (nor has there ever been) by the CDC or FDA to do appropriate and badly needed follow-up post-licensure safety studies.

Primarily due to Plotkin's influence, the near unanimous refrain echoed by the nation's medical choir for decades has been: vaccines do not cause autism. However, when recently deposed under oath, Plotkin and his co-authors have finally admitted that no trials have ever been done to prove or disprove that vaccines cause autism. So from Plotkin, to the US Surgeon General, to famous TV medical spokespeople, all the way down the medical food chain to local pediatricians and pharmacists, none of them can produce any peer-reviewed studies that scientifically prove that vaccines don't cause autism because there aren't any. That never stopped any of them from claiming otherwise. Further, since the science has not been done, any claims that vaccine injuries are "rare," has no scientific basis either. A statement like: "vaccines are the safest best tested things we put in our body," should now rightly be considered a sales pitch rather than scientific consensus.

This should be extremely concerning to all pediatricians and parents because currently the American Academy of Pediatrics recommendations state that children should receive 35 vaccine doses by the age of 15 months, 49 doses by the age of six, and 72 doses by the age of 18 with woefully insufficient proof that they are safe. Beyond that, there is no proof whatsoever that even if those vaccines had been properly tested for safety, there has never even been an attempt to scientifically prove that administering all these doses in

Back Pain Relief

Glen's Success Story

77-year-old Glen Graves from GP has suffered with lower back pain for over 5 years. His doctor called his condition “extreme” and prescribed pain killers which allowed Glen to function. Unfortunately, after overdoing house or yard work he would still have “break through” pain 2 or 3 times a week that exceeded the relief his prescription provided. For those times Glen found an over-the-counter topical cream that provided relief. However, Glen was extremely dismayed to find out the topical had been linked to a long list of very serious potential side-effects including stroke and liver damage.

That's when Glen came to Sunshine and was shown CBD topical pain relieving cream from Green Earth Medicinals (GEM).

The Results: In less than 30 minutes, the very first day, Glen got relief. Glen said that GEM CBD topical cream “allowed me to get up and go.” Glen now uses the cream a few times a week, whenever his lower back pain prevents him from taking care of business, close proximity to each other is also safe. Claims touting the safety of the schedule, no matter the source or how much you like and trust your family pediatrician, have no supporting scientific data whatsoever.

The Godfather of vaccines, Dr Stanley Plotkin has finally come clean in the NEJM. This is after decades of the entire medical and media establishments gas-lighting independently thinking doctors and concerned parents as conspiracy theorists if they dared to question vaccine safety, even those parents who heartbreakingly witnessed vaccine injuries to their own children, in some case within hours of vaccination.

Plotkin and company should have welcomed studies long before this attempting to show vaccines have not contributed to the rise in chronic childhood diseases which went from 12% of children in the late 1980s (when CDC recommended 7 routine childhood injections) to over 50% of children now (when CDC recommends over 90 routine childhood injections). Among conditions in children with precipitous rise in frequency in the last 35 years are: asthma, allergies, recurring ear infections, gastroenteritis, behavioral, including ADHD and autism, and more. Many of these conditions would never show up in a short duration pre-approval trial. And desperately needed long-term retrospective studies have never been done. Among other things, parents deserve to know if vaccines have contributed to creating the 2024 autism rate in children of, 1 in 36 overall and 1 in 22 for boys.

We need actual science to prove whether there is merely a correlation or whether the explosion of childhood vaccines has played a causative role in epidemic rates of chronic illness among children over the exact same time frame. The Godfather of modern vaccinology, Dr Stanley Plotkin, now admits sufficient studies have never been done!
